A $25,000 FINE FOR SAM PARKER

BALLOU SAYS IT SHOULD BE IMPOSED FOR ALLEGED LIBELOUS STATEMENTS.

Judge Lindsay this morning continued the hearing of the case of Ballou against Parker, a suit for libel on account of Parker having made alleged libelous statements in a legal document in the Parker ranch case. Ballou's cross-examination by Magoon continued, a number of deeds and agreements as well as considerable correspondence, being introduced.

Magoon closed his cross-examination with some questions as to which statements in the Parker document were considered by Ballou to be false and libelous. Ballou declared that it was false that he had acted as promoter and adviser with Parker in an enterprise in which he had afterwards attacked Parker's interests. Ballou said that he claimed $25,000 damages to his reputation by reason of the statement that he was "unfit to practice," and that the rest was a fine which he considered Parker should pay.

"You want Mr. Parker fined $25,000, do you?" asked Magoon.

"Yes, I do not know that that is too much for a man in Mr. Parker's position, to prevent him from repeating such an offense."

"And you would collect the fine?"

"The fine reverts to the benefit of the injured party, as I understand the law of punitive damages," replied Ballou.

On re-direct examination Robertson proceeded with the introduction of a lot more agreements and correspondence going to show that Ballou was not connected with the ditch proposition he was alleged to have been an adviser in and later to have attacked.
